

Financing Expanding Businesses in Manufacturing and Distribution

US Capital Global experiences rising demand for scalable alternative financing solutions from enterprises serving the manufacturing and distribution industries.

Manufacturing employment in the United States increased significantly last year, demonstrating the best growth figures in 30 years. While current trends predict continued growth, securing the right financing for a manufacturing business is not always easy.

Providing Custom Financing for Manufacturing and Distribution Companies

US Capital Global understands the needs and challenges company owners and CFOs face within the industry. From pharmaceuticals and aerospace manufacturing to LED lighting and medical equipment, the firm has a long and strong history of supporting manufacturing and distribution businesses across a wide range of sectors.

“We have successfully supported the expansion of manufacturing businesses in the USA and internationally for more than twenty years now,” said Jeffrey Sweeney, Founder and Chairman at US Capital Global. “My father was active in aerospace manufacturing since World War II, and after he retired I spent twenty years running the company, culminating in its sale in the early 1990s. The family business was built around technological innovation in manufacturing engineering. At US Capital Global, we are now focused on revitalizing banking through technological innovation and alternative asset management.”

Colleen Grey, CEO at Consensus Orthopedics, Inc., a leading designer and manufacturer of high-quality reconstructive total joint implants, explained: “We have continued to turn to the US Capital team to assist us in financing our working capital needs because of their breadth of experience in asset-based lending. The US Capital team has successfully structured and financed credit facilities on our behalf that increase our capital availability while decreasing our cost of capital.”
